The time has come for us, the Class of 1960, to bid our final farewell to Prospect Hill. Our class will always treasure the unforgettable experiences shared — joys, anxieties, laughter and growing up. In an environment conducive to intellectual and emotional maturity we have been instilled with the desire to learn and have been given a wonderful opportunity to develop our individual abilities. Prospect Hill has bestowed upon us a fine education and a lasting inquiring attitude, but above all it has endowed us with high ideals, integrity of purpose, and the desire to seek truth in knowledge. In return, it is our hope that we shall be able to make Prospect Hill proud of us in the future.

DEDICATION

We, the Class of nineteen hundred sixty, dedicate this yearbook to Mrs. Anne E. Roth. Her infinite patience and warm friendliness have won her the affection of our class. Her staunch support and enthusiasm for all school activities will always be appreciated and remembered by her students.

A Modern Fairy Tale

Alice was growing drowsy as the voice of her professor, reading from T. S. Eliot, droned on. Her eyelids grew heavier and heavier, and soon she heard nothing, for her mind conceived a tale far more wonderful in imagery in her deep dream than the story of Mr. Eliot.

After falling through seemingly endless space she landed on the front steps of Prospect Hill early in the morning. Opening the immense doors of the school, she wandered in and to her amazement heard voices com*ing from the library. On tiptoe she peered through the keyhole, and saw all the teachers seated around a gigantic marble table. Soon Alice saw strawberry tarts being served to the teachers and little china tea-cups being passed around. After watching them for awhile, her mouth began to water, and oh, how she wished she could run in and snatch a piece of the delectable pastry from the table. She tried and tried to push the huge door open, but her efforts were in vain.*

Suddenly, she turned around and her eyes beheld an exquisite powder pink plant with lovely lavender candy drops hanging from it. She ran toward it, and reaching forward, plucked as many as her tiny hands could hold. She could not devour them fast enough, and before she realized it, she began to grow and grow. The more she ate, the more she knew, because you see, the candy she had eaten was from Prospect Hill's renowned plant of knowledge. Before she knew it, her head almost touched the ceiling of the school, and she was forced to stoop down to get out of the building. She turned around and the structure which had seemed so immense to her now assumed the proportions of a doll house. Unable to believe what she saw, she blinked her eyes again and again, hoping that the school would resume its former size. To her utter dismay, it remained miniature. She became frantic and huge tears streamed down her smooth, rosy red cheeks. Gradually her feeling of fright changed to a feeling of accomplishment, for she now realized that she had passed through a phase of her life and therefore, everything behind her was no longer large enough for her. Alice had achieved fulfillment as a Prospect Hill Senior and now must look forward to college life.

She remembered as a little girl the time she entered Prospect Hill. The building looked absolutely gigantic to her. Alice recalled standing in the hall, noticing a tremendous gold key on the library table. The key glittered and gleamed—she could not take her astonished eyes from it. Then she saw one of the teachers pick up the key and unlock the doors of the classrooms. It was then that Alice heard the school bell ring for the very first time. Oh, the first taste of knowledge was wonderful, and the little girl loved learning about things previously unknown to her. The ABC's seemed rather strange and amazing, and she was just beginning to learn how to spell fascinating words which was, of course, a tremendous accomplishment for the long-haired miss. Numbers were fun as well, and she experienced a great feeling of achievement when she could finally master counting from one to ten. Alice regarded the older girls with envy, thinking of all the marvelous things they must be learning. On the way to and from school in the golden chariots, she heard the older girls speak of chemistry, philosophical novels, and term papers. Alice listened raptly, wondering what these awesome things meant. She would have to wait until she was in the upper school to understand these immense words and what they stood for. Wonderful experiences in learning were ahead for her in this castle of knowledge!

All too soon the bell rang again and she saw her classmates assembling on the lawn with their pink croquet mallets, setting up the golden arches for the game. The game that followed was exciting and Alice was thrilled to be on the winning team. How marvelous was this new school! It offered her so much more than just academic challenges, which were enough in themselves. This school offered her Glee Club concerts and many other activities in which she could participate. Each class had its own individual representative in the Student Coun*cil as well as other class officers, The Spilled Ink newspaper and the Art Club offered opportunities to any student interested in journalism and art. Every girl looked forward eagerly to the annual school fair. The dancing classes of prospective ballet prima donnas proved a delight to the younger girls. Each little girl hoped to be an angel in the Christmas Nativity pageant, and Alice felt herself part of these activities.*

Oh, those Seniors! She pressed her ear to the keyhole of the senior door and strained her ears to listen. Alice heard all the seniors reminiscing of past years spent at Prospect Hill and dreaming of things to be. They were trying to agree on the class will, prophesy, and other senior activities to be included in the yearbook. Her curiosity was piqued as she heard another confidential matter being discussed—the color of the seniors' graduation dresses. Her ears were filled with abusive language as the seniors verbally hurled all sorts of colors at each other — maroon, loden green, orange, and chartreuse. She longed so much to shout out her favorite color, Desert Sand, when she heard footsteps coming toward the door. Alice was forced to flee from her listening post and ran and ran and ran . . .

Prophecy

The Senior Class of 1960 took a field trip to Greenwich Village to observe the widely discussed social customs of that place. As the class huddled around a quaint table in the darkness of a coffeehouse drinking their espresso, someone suggested a novel idea. "Let's read the leaves on the bottom of our coffee cups and try to predict our future." (Leaves on the bottom of coffee cups?) Since beatniks are renowned for talking backwards it stands to reason that prophecies made in such a "beat" atmosphere would come out in reverse. Like here are our prophecies.

Sylvia Adams has married an English Duke and when she is not giving parties in London, Paris and New York, she resides in her castle in Scotland. The "Queen of International Society", she dictates fashions to women all over the world.

Cindy Bassar has dedicated her life to fighting juvenile delinquency in America. She has spiritedly rallied and led such various organizations as "BBP", "Bring Back Prohibition", and "DRR", "Down With Rock and Roll". In her spare time she has become a famous ballerina.

Cynthia Eichler has joined a group of anarchists and lives happily in a damp cellar with her bearded husband. Her fondest dream is to some day blow up the George Washington Bridge.

Susan Feuer is a leading exponent of popular music and is the famous disk jockey of a nation wide radio program. Known as the "Cleopatra of Rock and Roll", her name has been romantically linked with Elvis Presley, Ricky Nelson and Fabian.

Eydie Hartnett has become world famous with the publishing of her book, "The Four Lives of Sonia Borshnick", in which she reveals that she is the successive reincarnation of Helen of Troy, Josephine of France and a Bulgarian Milkmaid.

Jane Heyman is a renowned explorer and adventurer. In the Antarctic where she has discovered a rare breed of penguin that's white in back instead of front, she stood on the bow of her ship as it plunged through the icebergs and uttered her famous words, "Onward for Science!"

Jacqui Klein has gone into commercial art and has been extremely successful. She is most noted for her drawing of Pugsy, the famous dog on the "Bow Wow Puppy Food" advertisement.

Jackie Kocian is the celebrated Pulitzer Prize winning novelist and philosopher. She lives in a lonely mountain retreat, located in an obscure Balkan village, so she can communicate with her soul.

Leona Levitt has just been named "Teacher of the Year". Leona, Professor of Mathematics at Vassar, has finally achieved her lifelong goal. Her name will ring through the hallowed halls of Vassar College until the end of time.

Charlotte Mooney is well known around her residence in Greenwich Village. On clear days she can be seen in Washington Square, standing on her soap box and haranguing passing crowds.

Valerie Raff is looked up to in scientific circles and her works are studied by students all over the world. She is most famous for her advancement of Einstein's theories of quantum mechanics and relativity.

Carol Russo first came to public attention when she was arrested for organizing subversive clubs in college. Since then she has become notorious for the various newspapers that she edits which feature such slogans as "Lynch Herter", "Burn the U.N." and "The Communists are taking over Wall Street".

Annette Savino is very happily married with seven lovely children and is an active member of the P.T.A. In her spare time she does baby food commercials for a local T.V. station.

Maybe things would have been predicted differently if we had been drinking tea.
